Cover Too Modern

• I find your Christmas cover quite offensive.

It is probably a perfect specimen of modern "Art in Action," but the Holy Nativity was not modern and surely with so many of the world's beautiful pictures of the Virgin Mary and her Child available, you could have chosen a more appropriate Christmas cover than that color-splashed modern product. — Miss L.M.D., Esther, Alta.

Appreciated N.F.L. Games

• During the past several months each Sunday the CBC has presented the National Football League game of the day. I simply would like to express my thanks for many hours of pleasant viewing. The half-time commentators were both interesting and informative.

Viewers often are rather quick to criticize programs they dislike and just as often are slow to praise. I would like to cast this single vote that next year the football games will return, as will the commentators to continue this fine series. — P.P., St. Boniface, Man.

• May I congratulate the CBC . . . on the fine coverage of the past football season. We have enjoyed immensely those games which you chose to telecast.

I notice you receive complaints regarding the amount of sports carried on the network. I believe that the complaints come due to the fact that (often) a sports telecast runs three hours, and as a result those not interested feel the evening wasted. On the other hand, on a comparative basis for a week's telecasting, I wonder just how many hours are spent on musicals, westerns, detective and other types of programs. I think CBC devotes proper time to a good variety of entertainment, not the least of which is sport. Best wishes for continued success.—R.D.J., Calgary.

Trans-Canada Matinee "Very Necessary"

• To all those concerned with Trans-Canada Matinee: If I wrote to you every day, after each program, it would still not be enough to say how much I appreciate the fine job you are doing. It has become a very necessary and valuable part of my life.—Mrs. M.J.B., Edmonton.

A Viewer Speaks Up

• . . . As a regular viewer of TV programs over the past several years, (I am writing) this letter, long overdue.

Television should offer the greatest challenge to writers and producers—and what are they doing with their opportunity? Would "prostituting their talents" be too strong? . . .

(Evidently) someone in the television world does not realize that it is possible for the public to get tired of the same old faces and the same old format. If no one complains, I guess this same old thing will go on forever. I can often imagine after one of these programs that we have been suffering from for the last five or six years, the producer breathing a sigh of relief and saying, either audibly or inaudibly, "Well, that's another half hour out of the way."

In my humble opinion, television is deteriorating every year. I agree that you must endeavour to cater to all tastes, and that one man's meat is certainly another man's poison, but why do we have to suffer through Juliette, Don Messer, Danny Thomas, Bob Cummings, My Three Sons, Country Hoedown, etc., that we have been watching year after year? My suggestion is that about 30 weeks of any one personality is all the public can stand without tiring. I am not criticizing the performers, but to my mind (and many others agree) these people are suffering from a bad case of overexposure. Santa Claus would not retain his popularity if he came every week.

. . . In conclusion I must say that outside of the programs mentioned in this letter I think the CBC is doing an excellent job and does give us some excellent programs. I cannot commend too highly, among others, such programs as Close-Up, News-magazine, Festival (sometimes), football telecasts, N.H.L. Hockey, Citizens' Forum and some panel shows.—N.S.R., Stettler, Alta.

CBC Symphony Continues

Contemporary Music

The CBC Symphony's Festival of Contemporary Music continues this Sunday on CBC radio at 6 p.m. with a performance of Suite from Thyl Claes by 66-year-old Russian-born composer Vladimir Vogel, whose works are rarely heard on this continent. Walter Susskind will conduct. The program also includes the Overture, The Magic Flute by Mozart, and Concerto for Harpsichord by Frank Martin, with Greta Kraus as soloist. Vogel went to Germany in 1918 to escape Soviet oppression, and later moved to Switzerland, where he now lives, to avoid Nazi tyranny. His oratorio, Thyl Claes, is dedicated to resistance movements anywhere and in any time. Its principal character is the Germanic folk-hero, Till Eulenspiegel—not the clown of Richard Strauss, but the historical figure of Charles De Coster's story, whose family were victims of the Spanish Inquisition, and who later took part in the liberation of his own country. Vogel's three-part Suite is from the first portion of the oratorio.

"Fighting Words" on Television, Returning to Radio

Nathan Cohen, Toronto newspaper columnist, referees the panel show Fighting Words on Monday as it makes another of its presently irregular appearances on CBC-TV. But the program will be on each Monday evening starting March 5; and Fighting Words returns to CBC Radio next week, Wednesday, February 7, at 9:45 a.m.

PRAIRIE FOLK, like residents of any area, we guess, are proud of their native-sons-who-make-good. One of those native sons is W. O. Mitchell, rural Alberta's noted playwright. Jake and The Kid, his CBC radio series, was greeted with approval throughout Canada, but on the prairies it gained an audience of devoted listeners such as few radio programs have known. When Jake and the folk of "Crocus" moved to television last summer, the most enthusiastic acclaim once more came from the west.

Now, while radio listeners once more are chuckling with Mitchell, this time in a new series entitled Foothills Fables (Sundays at 12:30 p.m.), CBC-TV has announced a return to the TV screen of another Mitchell satire on small-town life, "The Black Bonspiel of Willie McCrimmon." John Drainie, "Jake" in the earlier radio series, plays the title role in the comedy about an inveterate curler who makes a bargain with the devil. CBC produced it first on radio in 1950, and then on television's Folio in 1955. The play will appear this time in the Playdate series. Watch for announcement of the date.

SONG ALBUM Monday at 6:45 p.m. presents a program of Hebrew, Israeli and Yiddish folk songs, some newly-written, others better-established, sung by folksinger Miriam Breitman. In reality, says Miss Breitman, most Jewish folk music is relatively new, in that much of it has been composed since the state of Israel came into existence after World War II.

Ben Horch, producer of Song Album, says that contemporary Jewish folk music goes "beyond the bounds of mere national aesthetic experience: the linear aspects of it (its melody) continue to subscribe to those qualities generally summed up by the term 'oriental,' whereas vertical aspects (harmony) conform to purely western concepts." He thinks that the art of the "sweet singer of Israel" may yet "reconcile the music of the east with that of the west."

Miriam Breitman

Since her last CBC television and radio appearances, Miss Breitman has made her first successful venture into the recording field, with a complete new recording of Jewish folksongs, some of them to be heard "live" on Monday's program.

MANITOBA'S fascinating past is revealed on a regular segment each Monday on CBWT's Ladies First. Hart Bowsfield, provincial archivist since 1952, talks about such topics as the early churches and forts in the province, towns that arose and disappeared during the pioneer era, and battles that were fought on the plains and on the rivers.

Many in the radio and television audience will recognize Mr. Bowsfield from his earlier appearances on such programs as Critically Speaking, Points West, Stop, Look and Listen and Eye to Eye, to name a few. He has contributed articles about Manitoba to leading encyclopedias.

The World of the BLIND

BLIND PEOPLE can do without self-pity, says Roy Haws of Toronto, blind for the last 24 years, married to a woman who lost her sight when she was two years old.

"A blind person will gain absolutely nothing if he feels sorry for himself," says Mr. Haws. "I personally don't like to 'see' blind beggars, mainly because most of these people are just too lazy to keep themselves. They don't have much respect and beggaring doesn't offer much in return. Another important fact is that blind beggars often give sighted people the wrong impression of the blind in general."

With the exception of a daily dose of insulin which is administered to Mr. Haws, who is a diabetic, the Haws do everything for themselves. Once every three months, however, a maid visits the Haws' residence to clean the places Mrs. Haws may have missed and also to wash the floors. The reason Mr. Haws needs a nurse to administer the insulin is because neither he nor his wife can measure the dosage.

This Sunday at 5:00 p.m. CBC Radio's Project '62 offers a revealing and sensitive look into the world of the blind through an interview with Mr. and Mrs. Haws by Bill McNeil. The program, entitled The Bright Darkness, will be heard on the Trans-Canada network. It is written and produced by McNeil and Jack Vance.

Although she never remembers seeing anything, Mrs. Haws has her own impressions of what various things look like. "People have described sunsets to me many times," she says. "But I've pretty well had to form my own opinion of a sunrise because there aren't too many people around at that time of day. Other things, which sighted people take for granted

Air?

WHEREVER THERE'S air, there's pollution. Pollution is deep—a mile deep—and it's spread in its greatest density around the floor of the ocean of air we call our atmosphere. How much damage this pollution is doing isn't really known but there are indications that it is a definite menace to human health as well as smelling bad, making a mess and interfering with our enjoyment of the atmosphere.

Most of the conclusions reached about air pollution are based on association. For example, there have been statistics showing that among people born and raised in England who have moved to Australia (which has relatively "clean" air) the death rate is higher than among those born in Australia. Also, in 1952 during four days in which a lung-searing pall of dirty grey air hung over London, 4,000 people died and most doctors and scientists said that the pollution contributed significantly to the death toll.

The term "pollutant" is applied to anything not naturally found in the atmosphere. There are various types of "man-made" pollutions, such as the smoke and fumes from household heating systems and vehicular traffic; commercial sources like dry-cleaning plants; and industrial sources such as factories. In the last three or four years another pollutant has been added: radioactivity, and this has been drawing much of the investigation of air pollution.

In North America there are various agencies conducting research into air pollution, often termed smog. For instance, in Ontario there is an agency called the Air Pollution Control Branch of the Ontario Department of Health. It is an advisory group which aids industry and municipalities by lending equipment to take air samples and advising on ways to improve the air cleaning process.

"As far as air pollution's effect on health is concerned, it's like the early medical days when doctors didn't have much information on such things as microbes," says W. B. Drowley, engineer with the Air Pollution Control Branch. "The whole area of air pollution is still in its infancy but there is plenty of research going on to find out what pollution does to us. There have been cases documented whereby certain wind velocities and industrial setups have been established as the source."

This Wednesday on CBC television's Explorations, a National Film Board production, The First Mile Up, examines the entire question of air pollution and the importance of controls in the face of expanding industries and continued growth of cities. David Bairstow wrote and directed the production.

Canada: Land of Winter

WINTER CAN be many things. To a small child it means sleigh-riding and snowmen; to a motorist it means hazardous driving conditions; to others it is a time of beauty, when lifeless forms are changed to the picturesque by a blanket of snow; and to still others it is the lifeless time of the year, the time which passes slowly and drearily.

Like it or not, winter is a part of the Canadian way of life; the only way to escape it is by moving south, a manoeuvre which thousands practise each year. For the millions who remain in Canada during the winter months, however, it costs millions of dollars to combat the savage fury of winter. It is estimated that we spend more than $50 million each winter to sand, salt and plow the streets of the many cities and towns, and the roads and highways. It

Program Notes

JANUARY 27

See also page 4 of next week's issue for possible changes in these notes and additional program information

CBWT—Junior Magazine

Junior Magazine returns to its magazine format with Norman Welsh as host. Each week Doug Maxwell, Ross Snetsinger and Hank Hedges will conduct certain segments of the show. Maxwell moderates a regular quiz with high school students. Snetsinger presents a section on crafts. Hedges introduces each week a film on underwater life.

World Of Sport

The Harlem Globetrotters. Host Jack Whitaker and former basketball star Ed MacCauley describe a game between the Harlem Globetrotters and the Washington Generals, played at Fort Myer, Va. The Trotters are led, both in basketball ability and in their special brand of laugh-provoking antics, by guard Meadowlark Lemon, "the clown prince of basketball."

Wonderful World Of Golf

U.S. star Bob Rosburg plays Japanese pro Torakichi "Pete" Nakamura at the Kasumigaseki course in Tokyo. Rosburg was the 1959 PGA champ and won the 1961 Bing Crosby Tournament. Nakamura is Japan's top pro golfer. With Koichi Ono as his partner he won the Canada Cup Tournament in 1957, and has won the Japan Open four times.

Marg Osburne, long-time favourite of listeners to Don Messer's Jubilee, takes over as hostess of the "Juliette" show this week while the star is ill.

Basketball is featured on "World of Sport" today, with the Harlem Globetrotters practising their antics against the Washington Generals.

According to host Gene Sarazen, Kasumigaseki Country Club is "the world's best-kept golf course." The total length is 6,913 yards—par is 72. There are two sets of greens for each hole—one for summer and one for winter, since no one type of grass in Japan is suitable for a golf green the year 'round.

Bowling

Five-pin bowling action from O'Connor Bowl, Toronto.

This Living World

Steve Bloomer talks about the habits of some jungle creatures including the rhinoceros, zebra, leopard and ostrich. Kokomo Jr., the monkey, also appears on the show.

Countrytime

A preview of the University of Manitoba agriculture students' Winter Fair, February 2 and 3.

Dennis The Menace

Dennis Has A Fling. Dennis has trouble getting Mr. Wilson to appear as a Scotsman in kilts for the All-

Nations Show being presented at his school. Featuring Pipe Major Grigor Murdoch of the Toronto Scottish Regiment and Susan Jones, Miss Scotland of 1961.

Dr. Kildare

The Search. An outbreak of food poisoning helps a disgruntled doctor decide whether he should remain in hospital work or go into public health.

Red River Jamboree

Songs and tales of the old Canadian west, with Stu Phillips as singing host, Peggy Neville, The Altones, the Valley Beaux and Belles, square dance caller Jo Johansson, Ted Komar and the Selkirk Settlers. Produced at CBC Winnipeg by Perry Rosemond.

This week, the cast features the carefree man of leisure in song and dance.

Saddle Tramp	Stu Phillips
The Wayward Wind	Peggy Neville
Happy Hobo Square Dance	Jo Johansson
One More Ride	and the Valley Beaux and Belles Group

NHL Hockey

Danny Gallivan reports from the Montreal Forum as the Canadiens play the New York Rangers.

Juliette

Marg Osburne takes the place of Juliette who is ill and cannot appear on this occasion. With The Romeos, The Four Mice, and Bill Isbister and his orchestra Marg makes the introductions and sings the following songs:

I've Got a Pocketful of Dreams
Whispering Hope
The Second Time Around

CBC television programs have been sold to the United Kingdom, Australia, the United States, the Netherlands, France, Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg and Switzerland.

"Dennis the Menace" this week is full of kilts and Highland flings as Mr. Wilson gets duped into more indignities.

costs somewhere in the neighbourhood of $240 million in roadbuilding and repairs—the roadbeds in this country have to be 50 per cent thicker than those of California to withstand the damage by frost.

But while the cost of fighting winter reaches astronomical figures each year, the money spent in recreation during the winter months also reaches considerable proportions. Skiing, skating, curling, hockey, tobogganing and other activities make this time of year worth waiting for for many.

This Monday night at 9:30, CBC television's Camera Canada presents an hour-long documentary about winter. Entitled A Winter's Day, the program examines a 24-hour period of the season, showing an infinite variety of faces, both in relationship to man, and indifferent to man. The program portrays the loneliness of winter, the beauty, the fierceness and the work and fun it creates for Canadians in all walks of life. Writer of the program is George Salverson, producer is Gene Lawrence and supervising producer, Thom Benson. An original musical score was composed by Ricky Hyslop.

The filmed program shows how winter affects various people. For instance, to those who take time to look — like children making themselves late for school—winter shows fascinating details of itself, from the minute to the grandiose. Snow on branches, snowflakes' variety, ice on moustaches, steaming breath, angels to be made in the snow, ice bridges at Niagara, and a church plastered in snow.

Society is constantly at work, battling the ravaging elements of winter, digging out earnestly while knowing that at any moment, another storm could strike and the whole process would begin all over. Among those shown on the program are those least able to deal with winter—the poor, the pensioners, the down-and-outs, to whom winter is unrelentingly cruel, while a Salvation Army band beats out its message of hope.

The program deals with this shallow envelope of air on which life depends and which is being contaminated at an ever-increasing rate. Some forms of air pollution—radiation and disasters such as London's lethal fogs—have been widely publicized, but health authorities in many cities are equally concerned about less spectacular forms of contamination emanating from household chimneys and the smoke stacks of industry. The program examines many aspects of air pollution and the importance of controls in the face of expanding industries and the growth of cities.

—such as rain, snow, pictures and colours—are also described by Mrs. Haws.

The daily life of a blind person doesn't vary much from that of a sighted person, according to Mrs. Haws. For instance, she has regular days for the jobs around the house. "On Mondays I do the wash, that is if it is a fine day; Tuesday is usually reserved for ironing; Wednesdays I spend at the hobby shop where I enjoy pottery and other interesting hobbies."

Mrs. Haws says one of the most important things for a blind person is memory. This is especially important in the preparation of meals. "I have to remember where I put things, but for certain commodities, such as spices, I label the containers in braille. Of course, smell also helps in cooking but if I have a cold, there's little cooking done."

While a majority of blind people use canes, Mrs. Haws doesn't. She says it isn't because of embarrassment but because she seldom goes out alone.

McNeil noticed that Mrs. Haws' clothes were in extremely good taste and that colors matched.

"I go shopping with someone I trust and who I know has good taste," she replied. "I try to choose someone who has much the same taste as myself and this usually works out. It's a little more difficult, however, when it comes to buying hats. Picking out my clothes each day isn't really difficult, because you get used to different materials. And again, memory plays an important part in dressing because I rely on it to find the clothes I want."

Because there is a similarity in men's suits and shirts, Mr. Haws' clothes are all marked.

Weather plays an important part in the life of a blind person. For instance, when it's raining, puddles offer some trouble. On the other hand, a wind can be beneficial to a blind person.

"A wind from a certain direction helps keep a blind person from getting confused," says Mr. Haws. "And when we are near an intersection, we can tell because often the wind acts as a warning when it suddenly blows full force near an intersection where there are no buildings."

One of the most important senses a blind person can cultivate—"everyone has it but a sighted person doesn't really have to use it to much advantage"—is the sense of solidity, says Mrs. Haws. "This is the instinct which tells us where walls are, or trees, or lamp posts. It saves us from having to grope along a wall with our hands. But it's a rather difficult thing to explain. You just sense that an object is nearby."

Zara Nelsova

Recital, Wednesday, January 31 at 10:00 p.m., features the renowned cellist Zara Nelsova, with accompaniment by pianist John Newmark. Miss Nelsova will perform the "Sonata in A major, op. 60 no. 3" by Beethoven, and "A Frog He Went A Courting," by Paul Hindemith.

'Cellist Zara Nelsova is featured on CBWFT Wednesday at 10:00 p.m. in "Recital."

Zara Nelsova was born in Canada, more precisely in Winnipeg. From her early childhood, Zara was surrounded with the colourful atmosphere of music. Her grandfather was a Russian operatic singer, and her father a flautist, and graduate of the Petrograd Conservatoire. Her early days were spent listening to her father and elder sisters play, and often there would be tears of disappointment at being unable to take part.

When she reached the age of four, Zara was given her first instrument, a viola converted into a 'cello; but the child found the 'cello no stranger. Her early lessons were rapid strides to perfection, and her effortless talent a thing to wonder at.

At the age of five, Zara Nelsova gave her first public performance to an audience of 4,000. This proved a decisive event in her life, for so unforgettable was her performance that

Georges Simenon

He's "Cooked Up" 400 Novels

THE WORLD'S most prolific living novelist—400 books — is an outwardly placid, inwardly restless, pipe-smoking little Belgian of 59, with courtly manners and a rich voice, who started as a pastry cook and now can roll out a mystery novel in 11 days.

His whodunits are invariably short, crisp, a panacea for the most jaded taste. He writes an average of five or six a year. They work inside him slowly the way a virus might.

His wife is the first to recognize the symptoms: he wanders aimlessly around the house, shuffles morosely through papers, turns the TV set on and off, ignores everyone, including the dog.

"My wife calls in the doctor to have me checked over. If he says it's just a novel, she knows I'll be all right again in a couple of weeks."

They cancel engagements and clear the house for action. His soundproof study in the chateau he and his Canadian wife bought near Lausanne a few years ago is lined with books on law and medicine, subjects upon which he is expert; telephone books from all over the world, from which he draws his characters' names; maps of towns where he sets his novels; and his own novels in 28 languages. He gave up reading anyone else's years ago—bad novels make him feel concealed, good ones depress him. On his wall is a big calendar on which he crosses off, as it passes, each of the 11 working days he allots each novel.

His routine is strict. He does little planning before plunging into a new novel. "Unconsciously," he says, "I probably always have two or three themes in my mind—not novels, not ideas about novels. I never even think that they might serve for a novel. Two or three days before I start writing a novel I consciously take up one of those ideas. But even before that I find some atmosphere. Little by little a small world will come into my mind, with a few characters; these will be taken partly from people I have known and partly from pure imagination. And then the idea I had before will come and stick around them . . . The beginning will be always the same; it is almost a geometric problem: I have such a man, such a woman, in such surroundings. What can happen to them to oblige them to go their limit? It will be sometimes a very simple incident, anything which will change their lives."

He writes a chapter a day in longhand, usually in the afternoon, types it the next morning. If an interruption breaks his routine, such as a 48-hour bout with the 'flu, he discards all he has written and starts a new novel. At the end of each chapter he has no idea what his characters will be up to next. As he delves deeper and deeper into his principal character's personality, he becomes that character, acting out the role to himself as he goes along, completely absorbed in it. Once, writing about a brute, he slapped his wife's face over some trifling disagreement—then came to suddenly, horrified at himself.

Occasionally, to maintain the strict privacy he demands during his 11-day marathon, he moves to

SPORTS

IF YOU'RE A golf enthusiast, no doubt you've been enjoying the Wonderful World of Golf show every Saturday afternoon on CBC-TV. This series was filmed on eleven of the world's finest golf courses, featuring an American touring pro, and the top golfer of the country where the film is made.

AFAGANIS

On Saturday, January 27, you will see Japan's outstanding Kasumigaseki course in Tokyo, a layout regarded as one of the best groomed in the world. Japan's sensational "Pete" Nakamura is paired with American Bob Rosburg, in what should be an interesting contrast. Rosburg is a hard hitting unorthodox swinger with a baseball grip, while Nakamura, the former Canada Cup champion, is a smooth, machine-like golfer with not much power but plenty of finesse and accuracy around the greens.

Golf, like baseball is very popular in Japan. . . . In the past eight years the number of players has increased nine times, and courses are being built on every spare piece of land in this overpopulated but sports-minded country.

So far, TV viewers have been able to see the Wentworth course outside London, the beautiful Banff Springs course, plus the most famous eighteen holes in the world, St. Andrew's in Scotland, the land where golf began.

Here in Western Canada, there was special interest in the Stan Leonard—Jackie Burke match played in Banff. A very large percentage of the players, especially in Alberta, has spent several enjoy-

Program Notes

METROPOLITAN OPERA

Gotterdammerung (Dusk of the Gods). Music drama in four acts by Wagner. Cast: Siegfried—tenor; Gunther—barytone; Hagen—bass; Brunnhilde—soprano; Guttrune—soprano; Waltraute—mezzo-soprano; Alberich—baritone; Woglinde—soprano; Wallgunde—soprano; Flosshilde—contralto. The Norns—chorus of men and women.

Introduction. The Norns, seated under the world ash, foresee the destruction of Walhalla and the approaching sorrow of the gods. Wotan has ordered that a spear be made from the world ash to replace that which Siegfried had destroyed. Loge is to set fire to Walhalla when God and the world have been freed from the curse of the ring and the Rheingold has been restored to the Rhine daughters. Wotan is seated in Walhalla awaiting the end. Siegfried wishes to go and try his strength among men. He gives the ring to Brunnhilde and they bid farewell.

Act I. Hall of the Gibichungs on the Rhine. Hagen, Gunser and Guttrune are present when Siegfried arrives. Hagen brews a potion to destroy memory, which is given to Siegfried. He now has no recollection of Brunnhilde and woos Guttrune. He drinks blood brotherhood with Gunther and joins him in the adventure to win Brunnhilde.

Change of scene. The rock of Brunnhilde. Wotan wishes to return the ring to the Rhine maidens but Brunnhilde retains it as Siegfried's love token. Siegfried appears in the form of Gunther by the magic of the helmet. After a struggle he takes the ring from her hand and forces her to do his bidding.

Act II. On the banks of the Rhine before the hall of the Gibichungs. Night. Alberich demands that Hagen keep the ring from the Rhine maidens. At the approach of day, Siegfried announces the arrival of Gunther and Brunnhilde. Hagen summons the Gibichungs to receive the bridal pair. Brunnhilde sees Siegfried united with Guttrune and accuses him of having betrayed her. Bitterly, she unites in a plot with Hagen and Gunther to kill Siegfried.

Act III. A forest and valley on the Rhine. The Rhine maidens vainly plead with Siegfried for the ring. Hagen arrives with Gunther and his followers. Hagen gives Siegfried a drink that will restore his memory. Siegfried relates his deeds and tells of hearing the Forest Bird. Siegfried is stabbed in the back by Hagen's spear and his last moments are filled with thoughts of Brunnhilde. His companions lay him upon a shield and with solemn death music bring him to Guttrune.

Change of scene. Hall of the Gibichungs. With cries of anguish, Guttrune rushes to the body of Siegfried and hears from Gunther that Hagen has slain her husband. Hagen now demands the ring. Gunther refuses to give it to him and is killed by Hagen. When Hagen attempts to take the ring the hand of the corpse is raised threateningly. Siegfried's body is laid upon the funeral pyre and Brunnhilde applies the torch after having taken the ring from his finger. As the flames rise she mounts her horse and ascends the burning pyre. The Rhine rises above the flames, the Rhine daughters grasp the ring, and when Hagen tries to obtain it they drag the son of Alberich down to the depths of the river. A great light appears in the distance—it is the burning of Walhalla and the end of the gods.

"On the Road"

A Glimpse of the Beatniks

WHAT'S A BEATNIK? Right from the horse's mouth, Jack Kerouac, perhaps not the first of the Beat but nevertheless their prophet-hero, an intense-brooding rebel of nearly 40, comes the confident statement that "Beats are intellectual—quiet, very Christlike. They are hip without being slick, they are intelligent without being corny, they know all about Pound without being pretentious or talking too much about it. . . . Being beat goes back to my ancestors, to the rebellious, the hungry, the weird, and the mad. To Laurel and Hardy, to Popeye, to Wimpy looking wild-eyed over hamburgers, the size of which they make no more; to Lamont Cranston, the Shadow with his mad heh-heh-heh knowing laugh. . . ." The Beat, he shows, devotes himself to cultivating the only worthy thing left in this cock-eyed world: his own ego. "It's a sick scene," he admits, "but anyway, I'm gettin' my kicks."

CBC-TV's Quest offers a glimpse of the grey world of the Beatniks, and of Kerouac himself, on Sunday night, in Norman Klenman's dramatization of an excerpt from Kerouac's autobiographical novel, On the Road, known as the Beatnik Bible. It stars Bruno Gerussi and Philippine-born actress Pilar Seurat, with production by Daryl Duke.

Kerouac, this cool cat who digs the world of the footloose, the disenchanted, the hungry-eyed, the libido-loving with a style both eruptive and meandering, like the Beats themselves, was born Jean Kerouac in Lowell, Massachusetts, on March 22, 1922, to a job printer and his wife, a girl of French-Canadian stock. As a boy, Kerouac's main interest was football, in which he was noted for his speed. At the Horace Mann School in New York, where he prepared for college, he won an academic and athletic scholarship to Columbia University in 1940. At college he played freshman football and made the varsity team the next year, but left college because, his coach said, "Kerouac is tired." The truth was that the wanderbug had bitten him. Badly.

He headed for Virginia, "to become a big poet." When nobody down South appeared to recognize his genius he enlisted in the United States Navy, but was given a psychiatric discharge two months later. He tried his hand at a variety of labouring jobs, then served with the Merchant Marine, and a year after he had pulled out of Columbia, he was back again. But not for long.

Within weeks, he gave up studying, rented an apartment near the campus, and made it the headquarters for a group of young rebels, among them Alan Ginsberg, who was to become the poet laureate of the Beat generation.

Kerouac soon tired of New York, and from 1943 to 1950 lived a nomadic life, on and off the road through the States and Mexico, and at sea, as merchant sailor, forest fire-watcher, and dozens of other jobs, periodically drifting back to his mother's home in Lowell to work on a book about his boyhood—The Town and the City, published in 1950. It was well received and carried a photo on its jacket of the author wearing a suit ironically close to the grey-flannel uniform of the Beats' enemy, the Square.

"I was his benefactor all his life," his mother has said. "He always lives with me, outside of when he travels. But when he did travel, there was always money for him. I used to send it any time he needed it, for food, clothes. I was working in a factory, I was making good money. You know, he's really a nice boy."

He tried marriage, unsuccessfully. "Yeah," he says, "I had two wives. Twenty-two years old, I got married, and I got married again at 28. Each time the audience recognized in this child a rare thing, a born 'cellist.

FRENCH TV HIGHLIGHTS

In 1928 Zara Nelsova left with her family for London, England. At her first public recital in London, the critical audience was startled at her unusual gifts: both with the nobility of her interpretations, and the natural execution of her instrument. Soon afterward she appeared as soloist in a concerto with the London Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Sir Malcolm Sargent, followed by memorable performances with leading English orchestras, and tours throughout the British Isles, Australia, Tasmania, Africa and Canada.

Where hitherto the few famed exponents of the violoncello have comparatively been limited to the male, Zara Nelsova, undoubtedly ranks as one of the very few great 'cellists living today.

The famed performer, who was hailed as an outstanding performer by such artists as Yehudi Menuhin, and Leopold Stokowski, will be seen and heard on the CBC French Network's Récital on CBWFT, Wednesday, January 31, from 10:00 to 10:30 p.m.

Popular

Robert Lamoureux, "l'homme-théâtre" as he is familiarly called, will be performing on Music-Hall, Sunday, January 28 at 9:30 in a one-man show. Robert Lamoureux is well-known through his numerous recordings of popular songs, but more so through his personal appearances on-stage, where his rare wit and rapid-fire reparties have enthralled audiences throughout the globe.

It is in this combination of song-man and wit that Mr. Lamoureux will be seen and heard, on our next Music-Hall.

On its feature movie, Monday, January 29 at 10:30, CBWFT presents a musical by Emile-Edwin Reinert, starring Marthe Harell and Anton Wohlbruck. Titled "la Guerre des Valses," it tells of a Viennese antiquarian who discovers manuscripts relating how the waltz became a popular dance.

Returning after a week's absence, Sur deux notes, Tuesday, Jan. 30 at 9:30 p.m., will feature singers Renée Claude, Jean-Pierre Ferland, and comedienne-dancer Denyse Filiatrault.

The program will feature, among other numbers, one of Gilbert Bécaud's latest hits: "La corrida," sung by host and performer Marc Gélina. Jean-Pierre Ferland and Denyse Filiatrault will unite in a sketch on the loves of Georges Sand and Chopin, and Renée Claude will perform three top hits of the day.

CBC production centres at Toronto and Montreal rank next to Hollywood and New York as the leading North American television centres.

The "Prairie Playhouse" series "Tay-John," adapted by Marian Waldman, above, concludes today on CBC Radio at 8:30 p.m.

a hotel, where he can take his typewriter and table into the bathroom and lock the world out. He keeps himself going with coffee which he brews himself, or soft-drinks, smokes a pipe incessantly, and fingers a monogrammed, solid-gold ball which his wife had Cartier's design for him—he says he thinks better when his fingers are busy.

When the novel is done, Simenon lays it aside for a few days, then spends three days cutting out the underbrush—mostly adjectives—to the spare style he likes. He can't be bothered retyping the manuscript, so he has it photostatted and shipped off to his publisher—and probably never looks at the book again. Then he calls the doctor to check that his blood pressure, which rises as he writes, is back to normal. It nearly always is. He hopes to continue turning out five or six novels a year for as long as his health will stand it.

A drama, "One Way Out," based on one of Simenon's hundreds of novels, is presented on CBC Wednesday Night at 8:30 p.m. on radio. Adaptation is by Ian Thorne.

In most of his mystery novels the central character is Maigret, a burly, compassionate detective who can also be ruthless. Simenon created him at a time when the French police were in disrepute, and ironically he called him Maigret—meagre—rather in the way he might call a tall man "Shortie." Maigret did so much to picture the police in a more sympathetic light that they presented Simenon with a medallion—a form of warrant given only to certain ranks in the Surete—incribed "Inspector M. 00000."

He has sold close to 60 books to the movies, at the rate of two or three a year. In spite of his frugal beginnings, his present fortune leaves him quite unexcited, as it does his mother, who has never become reconciled to his giving up a promising career in pastry. "Why don't you ever write a book about nice people and good Catholics?" she asks, "instead of all these criminals."

Surprisingly, Simenon never repeats himself. "I try to do with the novel what is generally done with poetry," he says. "I try to go beyond the real, the explainable ideas, to explore man, to give some message that does not exist practically."

One of the most frequent themes in his books is escape—physical or psychological flight from the world or from oneself, or rising or falling from one's origins. In each case he shows that escape is impossible. He knows from personal experience. He's been around the world looking for himself several times, has lived in 27 different places for intervals from a few weeks to five years, in circumstances varying from squalor to splendor. "I am at home everywhere and nowhere," he says. "I am never a stranger and I never quite belong . . . Writing is not a profession but a vocation of unhappiness. I don't think an artist can ever be happy."

He's been writing and getting paid for it since his mid-teens, and after 400 books some critics feel it's time he gave his public a big novel with 20 or 30 characters in it. "They do not understand," he says. "I will never write a big novel. My big novel is the mosaic of all my small novels."—June Graham.

the rest of us. Leonard's 69 on a windy snowy day proved that the Vancouver pro could beat the course even under difficult conditions — there are very few 69's in Banff, even in perfect weather. After the match, Burke told a few of the reporters covering the play that it was the most beautiful layout he had ever seen, and promised to come back with his wife for a long holiday in the very near future.

The show Wonderful World of Golf has been very popular so far in this part of the country. It's too bad that the series will run only 11 weeks. However, the program's sponsor and the CBC have made a lot of friends through this hour of sport on Saturday. Gene Sarazen, a Hall of Famer for his accomplishments in the game of golf, is the commentator. He enjoys analyzing the play and the player, and then following the match brings the two participants together for a clinic to explain certain parts of the swing.

The producers of the show went all out. They located on the finest courses in the world, and featured the best players anywhere. They shot an average of 40,000 feet of 35 mm film on every course, even though TV viewers will see only 5,200 feet on each show. Herbert Warren Wind, the authority and writer of "Golf in the United States," served as advisor and editorial supervisor, and a special musical score was written for each show. A tremendous effort was put forth to make Wonderful World of Golf a prime sports presentation.

the marriage lasted about six months. . . . She (the first) was nice. But the second one, I didn't like her. . . . I married her because she was beautiful."

Immediately his first novel was out of the type-writer, he started a new one. He decided that the laborious job of rewriting, polishing, painful editing, was not for him. "Whatever you try to delete from a manuscript, that's what's most interesting to a doctor." When he feels a novel coming on he buys 20-foot rolls of art paper, pastes the ends together, and types non-stop on one continuous roll—"about 10 feet in a good day"—until the whole novel is out of his system.

He took three years to write The Town and the City. He wrote On the Road in three weeks. Segments of it were published in the Paris Review and New World Writing, but the complete novel didn't appear until 1957.

It's a picaresque, biting report of the adventures of Sal Paradise (Kerouac), his Beat pals and their amoral girl-friends, on the road and at various stops along the way, as they breathlessly discuss themselves and try to resign from the world. What road? "Holyboy road, madman road, rainbow road . . . it's anywhere road for anybody, anyhow," where the carnal self can be celebrated with Whitemanesque delight. As one critic observed, Kerouac seems to say smugly: "Oh my God, it happened to me: every sacred, formless irrelevance is out of my own loving memory of myself."

The novel, a playback of his own tape-recorded experience, sold 20,000 copies in the hard cover, 500,000 in the soft, and was one of the most controversial books of recent years. Some critics described Kerouac's talent as extraordinary and refreshing. Others said his writing was bad and silly, and compared him with "a sensitive eyeball that sweeps and perceives but is not connected with a brain." Six months after hailing On the Road as a major novel, The New York Times omitted it from its list of novels worth reading.

If it did nothing else, On the Road helped to turn a cult into a national movement. The Subterraneans, The Dharma Bums, and Doctor Sax, other Kerouac novels, helped too, and he is reported to have further works on the boil or in manuscript form. "I'm only a jolly story writer and have nothing to do with politics or schemes and my only plan is the old Chinese way of the Tao: 'Avoid the authorities.'"

Kerouac is best when he's not trying to write cool, wild poetry, when he forgets Kerouac and offers instead a vigorous slice of life outside himself, free from dreary, introspective discussions in which he confuses freedom with irresponsibility, a search for faith with self-indulgence. Even at his most irritating, when he spits at urban life, "the midtown sillies' world"—but offers no real alternative, he is rarely boring.

Razzle Dazzle hostess

TV Work Helped Michele Finney Overcome Childhood Shyness

MICHELE FINNEY, at 12 years of age, is the youngest hostess on network television.

Five days a week Michele is co-host, with Al Hamel, of CBC-TV's afternoon program for children, Razzle Dazzle.

This role came after five years of hard work as a child model and actress, and, illogically, the early debut on TV at the age of seven can be attributed to a childish characteristic — acute shyness. Michel's shyness caused her to recoil every time she met anyone, to hide herself behind her mother's skirt. It reached a stage at which her father, Brian Finney, became very concerned about it and sought the advice of a friend, Estelle Wideman. Mrs. Wideman ran a modelling agency and school and she suggested that Michele enrol with her school. After three months at the school, Michele gradually grew out of her shyness and started doing modelling.

Modelling engagements for advertisements and commercials led to TV modelling on CBC-TV's Open House and eventually, at the age of nine, Michele made her television dramatic debut in the program Peace River Country.

utes. Add beets, put into jar and seal for table use.

Harvard Beets

2 cups drained canned beets
½ cup sugar
2 tbsp. butter
1 tbsp. flour
½ tsp. salt
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup beet juice

Melt butter in saucepan, add flour. Stir, adding sugar, salt and liquid gradually. Cook until clear, stirring constantly. Add beets and heat thoroughly.

She has since had principal roles in CBC dramas, including The Crucible, Kiss Mama Goodbye, Quality of Fear and others. In addition, she has conducted an interview on Seven-O-One, a CBC-TV program seen in Eastern Canada, and has appeared on several CBC radio programs for children, and on school broadcasts.

This solid professional background was just what Razzle Dazzle producers were looking for when they were selecting a co-hostess.

"One of the wonderful things about Michele is her complete professionalism," said Bill Davidson, who co-produces Razzle Dazzle with Sandy Stewart. "She is almost devoid of temperament, and things don't get her down as they might if she didn't have so much experience."

As co-hostess of Razzle Dazzle, Michele is the envy of her pals at Rosedale Public School — mainly because she gets every afternoon off from school to attend the program. What they probably don't realize is that school for Michele starts again in the evenings, with a private tutor for her school subjects. This was a stipulation by the Board of Education when allowing her time off school. Michele has managed to keep up with her class and, in some subjects is ahead of her schoolmates. In addition, she has homework to do, takes dramatic studies with actress Josephine Barrington, and devotes hours to learning scripts for dramas and for Razzle Dazzle.

Despite all this work, Michele finds time to play. She has a most unusual hobby for a 12-year-old girl — archaeology, which she became interested in after visiting an old Indian burial site close to the Finney summer cottage near Campbellford, Ont.
